AFTER SEVENTEEN YEARS.

A Man Who Was Punished for Burglary Exonerated by the Real Thief.

From the Steubenville, O., Correspondent Cincinnati Enquirer.

Seventeen years ago John Cassaway, a Steubenville man, was sent to the penitentiary from Cleveland for two years for stealing a watch. Despite his protestations of innocence, Cassaway served his time as a convict, and at the expiration of his sentence returned to this city, where his young wife resided. To-day Postmaster Sarrant received a letter from Mrs. Margaret Lane of Youngstown, confessing that she was the thief, and exonerating Cassaway of the charge for which he suffered imprisonment in the state prison. The woman, who is in the last stages of consumption, says she desires to make restitution for the great wrong done an innocent man before she is ushered before her Maker, and confesses that she alone stole the watch for which John Cassaway suffered the disgrace of being branded as a thief and convict.

Mrs. Lane's letter and confession have created the greatest excitement in this city, where Cassaway's family is well known and highly respected. Cassaway, when a boy, came here from Smithfield, Ohio. He remained here until he reached manhood and married Miss Rachel, daughter of John Fissor. He was a druggist by profession, and in 1874 went to Cleveland, O., to accept a more lucrative position. He boarded at a private house, and it was while there that he was charged with having stolen a fine gold watch. Circumstances pointed to him as the thief, but he firmly protested his innocence. Notwithstanding this the circumstances against him were so strong that he was convicted and sentenced to the penitentiary for two years. After serving his term he returned to Steubenville, where his wife awaited him, firmly believing in his innocence, and the couple went to Allegheny City, Pa., where Mr. Cassaway is now practicing as a druggist. During these 18 years Cassaway, since his incarceration in the penitentiary, has suffered patiently for the crime of which he was innocent. Last evening Cassaway's exoneration came to the postmaster of Steubenville in the shape of a letter, of which the following is a copy.

"In the year 1874 I was a book agent in Cleveland, and one day called at a house, and while sitting in the room I saw a fine gold watch lying on the dresser. I could not resist the temptation, and took the watch. I left the house unnoticed. As I went through the yard I saw a man go through the yard and the children. However, I did not commit a crime before, and was so worried over it that I could not content myself. Being a good Catholic, I went to confession and was advised to return the watch. I went to the house to return the watch and was met at the door by a servant, who told me they did not want any books and slammed the door in my face. Being unable to gain admission to the house, I went to my room where I was boarding and hid the watch in the fireplace, it being filled with waste paper, etc.

"I worried over the theft so much that I took sick. The doctor was sent for and pronounced it fever. I was delirious, and so sick from fever as not to know what time of day it was. My mother was sent for, and after she had nursed me for some time she took sick and died. After my recovery I was unable to find the watch, the fire-place having been repaired while I was sick. I do not know whether it was taken away or destroyed, and my mother's death prevented me from making any restitution at that time. I then went to Nebraska and after living there four years I married. My husband was killed in a collision on a railroad. This accident occurred when he had been married about a year and three weeks before my baby was born. I made occasional trips to the cemetery to visit my husband's grave, while in the cemetery, on one of my trips I had left the baby in the buggy and while I was working at my husband's grave the buggy, which was standing on the side of a little hill, got started from the baby, who was restless, moving around. The buggy ran down the hill and over a precipice and my baby was brought to me dead. I saw in the papers that a young man named Gasaway had been arrested and convicted for stealing the watch, and sent to the penitentiary for two years. One paper said he was from Smithfield, Ohio, and the other paper from Steubenville. My health is gone and I feel that my time here is short. I want to find out who the young man was and to make all the restitution in my power, and have written to Cleveland to find out who the watch-case was stolen from, so that I could pay for it. I am on my way to Philadelphia for treatment for consumption, and stopped off here to rest."

Fourteen Dogs Shot.

Fourteen dogs that have been in the pound for several days were shot yesterday morning by the officers. At this rate people will soon be able to venture outside their homes without having a pack of curs at their heels. All those who have dogs that are of value to them should secure collars at once or their animals will meet with the same fate as those that have been killed.
